APPLIED LEARNING

May 23, 1988

The Honorable William H. Webster
Director of Central Intelligence
Washington, DC 20505

Dear Judge Webster:

I certainly enjoyed our conversation

but hectic schedules have prevented us from seeing each other more often.

As I mentioned, Applied Learning and its corporate predecessors (Deltak and Advanced Systems) have been providing the Agency with information systems training for five years. During the past several months, Applied Learning has been working closely with the Office of Training and Education and the Office of Information Technology in order to more fully explore the advantages of Interactive Video Instruction (IVI). As a matter of fact, several of the OT&E executives will be reviewing some of Applied Learning's more than 450 IVI discs tomorrow. These discs constitute the world's largest and most comprehensive IVI library for Information Processing, End-User Computing and Human Resource Development.

As you and I discussed, computer literacy among all levels of personnel is a key ingredient to successful (read timely and accurate) operations in today's world of information gathering, analysis and distribution. Applied Learning is making a significant impact at the FBI, NSA and the Secret Service in this regard. We hope that our efforts can have a similar result for the Agency. Your awareness of the power of IVI as a teaching medium would, in my judgment, be most helpful in more fully implementing this training technology at the Agency. To that end, I would strongly recommend that you take 15 minutes or so to receive a hands-on IVI demonstration at your convenience.

Again, I enjoyed talking with you and look forward to discussing these issues in the near future.

Sincerely,

Ray
